These tables are to be used as a guide only. All children are different.

The number of clothing layers may vary according to a child's health, their physiology and the temperature in the room.

The carer must determine what is suitable.

A tog is a measurement of warmth and has nothing to do with the thickness or weight of the bedding.

The higher the tog, the warmer the product is.

Health experts recommend that the ideal room temperature for your baby is between 16-20°C ♥

Check and touch your baby regularly to ensure the baby is not too warm or too cold. If in doubt, call a health professional.
